

YOU WOULDN'T THINK PEOPLE WOULD WANT

A STEEL MILL FOR A NEIGHBOR.

At Nucor, we care about the environment, not only meeting, but often exceeding pollution requirements in the states we're in. We recycle steel, keeping it out of surrounding landfills, and encourage others through community recycling efforts as well. We raise monies for local charities, build parks and wildlife refuges, provide first responders for emergencies and support the communities we live and work in. We provide high paying jobs (some of the highest in our industry), increase take home pay by more than two-thirds with performance bonuses and profit sharing. And we encourage our team members to make decisions, take responsibility and treat each other with the respect they deserve. Now don't you wish you had more neighbors like us?

It's Our Nature.

Please extend our thanks to Dirk Petersen and the rest of the Nucor Management team for the neighbor's "get together" held on July 30.

The event was not something that "had" to be done, but is a good illustration of Nucor's desire to keep communication open.

Wanted you to know it's appreciated.

-- Jim and Elaine Halferty

That note pretty well sums things up. On July 31, Nucor Nebraska hosted our second bi-annual Neighbor Meet and Greet. The event was first held two years ago. The purpose of the Neighbor Meet and Greet is for key Nucor leaders to get to know our neighbors, build relationships, and put faces with our names so neighbors have known points of contact if they ever have any problems or concerns. Building those relationships is one way we strive to ensure that our neighbors don't notice our presence.

Eleven neighbors representing 7 residences surrounding Nucor attended this event. In attendance for Nucor were Nucor's general manager, department managers, and Environmental Department leaders. The evening involved introductions of Nucor and neighbors, a brief presentation on Nucor Nebraska, dinner, and a plant tour.

The presentation introduced Dirk Petersen as our new general manager and provided introductions of our leadership team, and gave our neighbors the opportunity to introduce themselves. The presentation continued with a brief biography of Dirk and presented Dirk's values for Nucor Nebraska. The remainder of the presentation talked about issues facing Nucor (safety performance, aging workforce, Card Check, and Cap and Trade) and what discussed Nucor's approach for addressing those issues.